

Employment law

Due to the special relationship between employer and employee, employment law advice calls for not only a high level of professional expertise, but also a special sensitivity. This is exactly what the specialist lawyers in our employment law practice group stand for. We advise our clients – national and international companies, board members, managing directors and executives – on all issues concerning individual and collective employment law from a legal as well as a strategic perspective. Our approach to consultancy is pragmatic and solution-oriented, individual and efficient.

In order to keep our clients up to date and to make sure they are aware of issues that are likely to come up in the future, our team also offers regular practice-oriented training opportunities and information events on the subject of employment law.
